

From the Rainbow Room

Anthony Hicks

to the alternative versions of ourselves

and to the hope that some day they may no longer be strangers to us

FROM THE RAINBOW ROOM

Preface

There is an openness in finding the solutions to life by experiencing the process associated with healing from pain.

As individuals who are lost in their own identity, we battle the mystery of sorrow until what was mysterious is finally met with a definition of purpose.

In the Rainbow Room, we are alternative versions of ourselves who are unknown to us.

In the Rainbow room, we can lose our heads and exist without ego.

In the Rainbow Room, time is nonexistent, emotions are never fleeting, and everything is ambiguous.

The Rainbow Room is absent of judgment in all forms.

The Rainbow Room is absent of exclusivity.

The Rainbow Room is everything and nothing.

We've made it through the sadness.

This is From the Rainbow Room.

